

Dust Hood

A sanding table with a dust collector works great for keeping a shop clean while finishing a project. But with smaller pieces of wood, a lot of dust still floats up into the air, escaping the dust collector ports in my table.

To solve this problem, I use a plastic window well cover that I purchased at a home center. The hood-like cover traps all the dust in one area, which allows the dust collector to better remove it from your table. When I'm finished sanding, I store the dust hood under my bench out of the way.
